Re: Comments regarding IU Health Bloomington Hospital construction

In response to the Indiana University Board of Trustees vote:

Any or all of the following statements may be attributed to Matt Bailey, President of the IU Health South Central Region, which includes IU Health Bloomington Hospital:

“We are pleased with the Indiana University Board of Trustees vote, and see it as a vote of confidence as we move forward with our plans to make the new regional academic health center a reality for residents of the 11 counties we serve. This campus will create a synergy between academic learning and clinical services that will enhance the environment for future health professionals”

“Plans for the IU Health portion of the project continue to move forward and significant progress has been made. We have completed definition of the guiding principles for the campus and this fall interdisciplinary teams worked to address how the delivery of healthcare can be transformed in the future. This work resulted in models of future patient care units, which are being evaluated to ensure that they will provide an optimal setting for both our patients and caregivers.”
