RAISING AWARENESS FOR BULLYING

Indiana University Health Saxony Hospital donated funds to help purchase two Stop Bullying Benches at Fishers High School as part of the hospital's efforts to raise awareness about behavioral health issues. The project idea was developed and seen through to its end by student Katelynn Buchan, who has a passion for creating awareness about bullying and helping to stop it.

"Earlier this year I put the first Stop Bullying Bench at Fishers High School. The number of students and teachers who have shared their stories with me about my project and the bench is something I never expected. What appears to some as a piece of metal or a place to sit has helped, inspired and been a safe haven for many."
