

IU Health Congregational Care Network chaplain role

About IU Health Congregational Care Network (CCN)

IU Health understands that good health includes body, mind and spirit, and for many of our patients, a faith community is an integral part of the care team. We also know that social isolation and feelings of loneliness can have a negative impact on patients' health. Congregational Care Network is a resources to connect patients and their families to the right resources at the right time, while providing faith-based encouragement along the way. Our chaplains have collaborated with congregations in our neighborhoods to offer a listening ear and help make those connections.

Congregational Care Network chaplain role

- Provide spiritual and emotional support to all patients and staff members
- Conduct a complete spiritual care assessment and provide patients with appropriate interventions
- Provide support to patients who are experiencing grief and loss
- Connect isolated and lonely patients to a broader community
- Connect patients to the CCN social worker to provide the patient with resources
- Complete advance directives
- Chaplains are a part of the IU Health care team.

Chaplain referral

Any member of a patient's care team can refer to a CCN chaplain. Referrals can be sent in Cerner or to ccn@iuhealth.org.

Additional details

This program is offered at no cost, and patients can opt out at any time. If you would like to learn more, contact Lynel Beaty at 317.478.1613.

Indiana University Health