

Congregational Care Network

About us

IU Health understands that good health includes body, mind and spirit and for many of our patients, a faith community is an integral part of the care team. We also know that social isolation and feelings of loneliness can have a negative impact on patients' health.

Congregational Care Network is a resource to connect patients and their families to the right resources at the right time, while providing faith-based encouragement along the way. Our chaplains have collaborated with congregations in our neighborhoods to offer a listening ear.

Here for you

IU Health chaplains have identified a number of volunteers, called “connectors,” who are each trained in spiritual and companionship care and will be available to you during your adjustment to life at home following an appointment or hospital stay. Connectors are available for persons of all faiths, and for persons who don't identify with any particular faith or tradition.

- Connectors offer one hour of conversation per week for 12 weeks.
- Connectors listen to your needs and concerns.
- Connectors help you to connect with your own inner strength and your own spiritual resources.
- Connectors help you to connect with community and health resources, such as assistance with social services or communication with your medical team.

Additional details

This program is offered at no cost, and you can opt out of the program at any time. All conversations take place by phone or where possible by virtual platform, like FaceTime or Zoom.

Indiana University Health

iuhealth.org